On Jan. 6, 1802, it is further alleged, the case was dismissed by the county attorney, neither of the defendants appearing to prosecute. In conclusion McGuire says that he lost his position with the Rio Grande Western as a result of his arrest and that he has been disgraced and humiliated to his damage in the sum demanded.

Mr. Foulks said yesterday afternoon that he had nothing whatever to do with the arrest of McGuire. According to Mr. Foulks says he was told that McGuire $20 with which to bring his wife to Utah.

Mr. Foulks says he was told that McGuire was preparing to leave the city. He then went to the Albany hotel to inquire after McGuire, and learning there that he was expected to leave the city Mr. Foulks went to the depot to locate him. There, Mr. Foulks says, he met James Higney, who was also on the lookout for McGuire, and sifter the going rang for the departure of the train McGuire came out from the west side of the track and was stopped by Higney, who made him pay $10 on account of his board bill at the Albany.

Several years ago Hathenbrook related the story of the finding of the mine and the story of a trip which he claimed to have made to it to a close friend and associate who lives in this city. In view of the agitation which is being caused by the Uintah land lease and the supposition that the lost mine is to be worked by means of this lease, the story, as told by Hathenbrook, was given to a Herald representative yesterday by the person to whom it was related.

How Rhodes Learned Secret.

How Rhodes Learned Secret.

How Rhodes Learned Secret.

"The location of the mine has long been known by the Indians," he said, "but the first white man to find it was "Cal" Rhodes, a pioneer settler, who once had a lease on some mining property in the reservation, and who knew almost as much about the country as the Indians. He learned the secret from the Indians and on one occasion took his son with him to the mine. He always brought back plenty of gold after these trips.

"Hathenbrook told me that several years ago he induced this son to take him to the mine. He told me they traveled from Vernal by a circuitous route, somewhere over towards the Colorado line. They rode horseback, and after traveling over mountains and through valleys, where the fallen wood was so thick they could hardly get their horses along, they finally arrived at the edge of a lake, or stream of water, the exact nature of which Hathenbrook would not explain to me. Here they left their horses, he said, and, lashing two logs together, rowed across the water to the other shore. Here, he said, they found a ledge of ore so rich that the gold could be separated simply by pounding the rock in a mortar, and nuggets could be picked up easily.

Supply is Immense.

"There seemed to be an exhaustless supply of the gold, he said, and it was easy of access from the water. They stayed there, according to his story, two or three days, ballding no fires and remaining out of sight in the day time to prevent possible discovery. They then recrossed the lake and cutting the logs apart, moved one down the bank a long distance, so that any person who might chance upon the spot would find nothing to indicate that a raft had been used.

"Just after he returned from the trip Hathenbrook came to see me and showed me some of the gold which he claimed to have gotten from the mine on that trip. The specimen which he

From information given by Hathen-brook to a confidential friend it is believed that the famous mine is within the bounds of the proposed Uintah land lease, which is causing such a stir among the officials, both in Utah and Washington at the present time. Hathenbrook claims to have visited the mine and has exhibited nuggets of rich gold. Which he claimed came from the mine, but for some reason he has guarded the secret of its location jealously and so far as known has made but one trip to the place.

rule the committee on police and fire departments might have an important negative influence on the mayor's design to have Chief of Police Hilton removed and the department reorganized on political lines for the benefit of the Revublican machine.

Already predictions are rife that the committee which will have the preliminary consideration of Chief Hilton's fate will be President Cottrell, Councilmen Fernstrom, Sharp, Daveler and Hewlett, the majority of whom favor the retention of the chief until the mayor shows a reason more to their satisfaction why the removal is desired, and, moreover, fortells whether it is intended to appoint Detective Sheets to the office if a vacancy is agreed to. On these lines it is declared that the chief will not be dismissed from the service "for its good." as the mayor puts it, on the committee's recommendation.

The committee on rules will hold a session this afternoon and one of its tasks will be to determine how many committees there shall be and the number of members for each committee.

Death of a Pioneer.

(Special to The Herald.) Where the Mine Is,

"He told me the mine was near the Colorado line, but inside of Utah, and that no one could get to it with safety, because the Indians were watching it too closely. I proposed to him to form a company and open up the mine, but he would hear to nothing of the kind and since that time has said nothing more to me about it.

"He and this son of Rhodes are the only white men who claim to know the location of the mine, but from what he told me it could undoubtedly be included within the proposed Uintah land lease, and some of those who are interested in that probably have discovered the secret."
